REBEL AERIAL RAID LEAVES SHAMBLES IN MADRID SECTOR

Crumpling Buildings and Battered Streets Give Beautiful City Appearance of Series of Deserted Villages; Many Killed

LOYALISTS CLAIM 2 SHIPS SHOT DOWN

Madrid Militia Captures Town of San Tolis; Fascists Reported Repulsed in Guadarrama Area.

By ALEXANDER H. UHL.

MADRID, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Bombed and shell-torn Madrid resembled a series of deserted villages today with crumbling buildings and battered streets in many sections as a Sunday morning Fascist aerial attack brought new death and damage.

The deadly daily shower of shells in the critical stage of the civil war has crumpled many houses. Walls of others still stood, but shakily.

Broken and burned furniture could be seen through shattered windows of buildings that had not been crumpled into enormous holes opened by devastating bombs.

Shells today fell into the fashionable Paseo de la Castellana, Ayala street and San Bernardo square where many were killed or wounded.

Several buildings were destroyed. Artillery fire through the night struck several houses near the telephone building and the government claimed two Fascist pursuit planes had been brought down after a bombardment in the Arguileles district.

An official bulletin reported government guns shelled Anover de Tajo, west of Aranjuez to the south of Madrid, and destroyed the town.

Madrid militia captured the town of San Tolis in the Guadarrama sector and the war office said Fascists were repulsed in the Guadarrama sector, northwest of Madrid, after a fierce battle.

The newspaper Claridad spurred government militia to continue defense of Madrid, asserting: "We have defeated the Generals, Franco, and Mola (Fascist chiefs), and we will now defeat Hitler and Mussolini and their fair-haired Moors."

A more than usual quietness in the city.

Trotsky Is Offered Asylum by Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6.—(AP)—The foreign relations department announced tonight the Mexican government had given permission to Leon Trotsky, Russian revolutionary now in Norway, to come to Mexico and remain as long as he desired.

A statement issued by Foreign Secretary Edouard Hay said Trotsky's life "was in grave danger" because European governments had refused him permission to live within their boundaries.

The statement pointed out that the authorization granted to the exile from Russia to come to Mexico is in line with Mexico's policy of granting "asylum to those exiled for political causes."

Reports Trotsky was seeking permission to live in Mexico before quitting Norway, first came last week from the Confederation of Workers of Mexico, which announced it would do everything possible to keep him out of the country.

Stricken Pope Reported Slightly Improved

A stroke, aggravated by high blood pressure, has left Pope Pius XI partially paralyzed in his lower limbs but in spite of that, the holy father insists on using his keen mind and unimpaired arms to carry on his work. This is one of his latest pictures.

POPE'S CONDITION SLIGHTLY BETTER

Millions of Catholics Throughout World Pray for Pontiff's Recovery.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI gained slightly today in his fight against partial paralysis of the legs while millions of Catholics throughout the world prayed for him.

A verbal bulletin given out in the evening declared:

"His holiness' general circulatory condition has been notably improved because of the repose which he finally has been willing to take."

The Pope, prelates said, ate heartily tonight of a dish of rice with meat sauce. He expressed a desire to participate in Monday's Vatican services for the beginning of advent, but doctors would not permit it.

The ceremony was being prepared, however, as if the Pope were to be present.

Prelates Relieved.
Vatican prelates felt especially relieved over this improvement in circulation because they had feared a blood clot which developed on the left leg of the 79-year-old pontiff might have serious consequences.

The Pope, suffering also from the general ailments of advancing age, Continued in Page 2, Column 2.

SEC Must Approve Dividend Payments

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Existing broad powers under the public utility holding company act, the Securities Exchange Commission today prohibited registered holding companies from paying dividends unless approved by the commission.

The order was issued under that section of the act which gives the commission power to prevent the dividend payments in order "to protect the financial integrity of companies in holding company systems, to safeguard the working capital of public utility companies, to prevent the payment of dividends out of capital or unearned surplus."

The commission's order becomes effective January 1, 1937.

Take any British King. Take this present one. To prove loyalty to his native land, he must go on daily with the English meat pie which daily is operated on for kidney trouble with the three staple vegetables of the Englishman's dinner table: namely, boiled potatoes, boiled cabbage—and a second helping of the boiled potatoes. Then, for a special treat, the vegetable marrow which is a semi-luminous growth, tasting like the place where a sick cucumber spent the night; and often for dessert, a thing called bird's custard. Birds are all right at laying eggs and singing, but should stick to their own department.

YACHT IS MANNED AT MONTE CARLO; CRUISE RUMORED

Ship, Owned by Friend of King and Mrs. Simpson, Boarded in Harbor by Captain, Crew; Hints of Trip Not Confirmed.

POLICEMEN GUARD WALLY'S HIDEAWAY

Friend of Edward Rested by 11-Hour Sleep After Trip Through France; Shies From the Curious.

CANNES, France, Dec. 6.—(AP)

The captain and a full crew boarded the yacht Sister Anne in Monte Carlo harbor tonight after some reports said King Edward VIII, if he abdicated, would fly to meet Wallis Warfield Simpson aboard the vessel.

The yacht is owned by Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, old friend of both the King and Mrs. Simpson.

It was, however, impossible to confirm reports of a prospective cruise aboard the Sister Anne.

Mrs. Simpson, who may cost a King his throne, arose refreshed by 11 hours sleep today after her long auto voyage across France, and threw open the blinds of her room at Lou Viei villa to gaze at the magic panorama of the Riviera.

Appears at Window.
Clad in light blue silk wrap, the American-born divorcee who roused the British empire to government crisis because of King Edward's desire to marry her, appeared at the window at 11 a. m. to draw in deep breaths of the crisp air, scented by orange groves on terraces between the villa and the sea.

Suddenly Mrs. Simpson noticed a small group of curious townsfolk gathered near the estate's carefully guarded gateway and drew back into the villa.

The former Baltimore woman, who fled from King Edward's rural Belvedere castle when the British crisis broke Friday in parliament, spent the entire day at the villa of her intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, of New York.

CAROLINAN KILLED IN AUTO COLLISION

Another Motorist Suffers Serious Injuries in Early Morning Crash.

One man was killed and another seriously injured early yesterday morning in traffic accidents in the city. The fatal accident occurred at 2 o'clock, when a car driven by Z. M. Clouse, of Franklin, N. C., was in a collision with another machine at Forsyth and Garrett streets.

Clouse was buried from his car, and was pronounced dead on arrival at Grady hospital, where examination revealed his skull had been fractured and his right arm and left shoulder crushed.

His death marks the eighty-first traffic accident in the city limits of Atlanta since the first of the year and the first traffic fatality of the month. The city's traffic death toll is now at an all-time high.

Police reported Clouse's car was struck by a machine driven by W. H. Crusselle, 25, of 1100 Stewart avenue. Crusselle was booked on charges of drunk and reckless driving and made $1,000 bond. His trial was set for 8:30 o'clock this morning in recorder's court. Crusselle was not seriously injured.

Queen Fears King Will Abdicate And Join Mrs. Simpson by Airplane

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press—London, Dec. 6.—Queen Mary and other members of the royal family feared tonight that King Edward was planning to join Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson suddenly and secretly—probably by airplane.

Queen Mary, it was learned tonight, saw Edward secretly from 4:30 p. m. to 7:20 p. m. yesterday and the two quarreled violently. It explained her absence from Marlborough House during those hours, when no one knew where she was.

During the talk Queen Mary appealed to the King in the name of decency and the memory of his father, the late King George, to think of his

Another Simpson Romance Hinted Amid Royal Crisis

England's constitutional crisis, brought on by the friendship of King Edward for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, centered interest anew upon the husband she is divorcing, Ernest Simpson, and his American friend, Mrs. Jacques A. STORMS INJURE 60 IN 4 DIXIE STATES

Parts of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas Swept; Damage Heavy.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 6.—(AP)—Off-season tornadoes dipped into sections of four mid-south states today, injured more than two score persons and wreaked heavy damage on property.

Communities and small cities in Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas suffered.

Several persons were injured, 50 small houses were blown down and heavy damage wrought by a tornado thrust into Longview, Texas. The injured all were negroes.

Moving from west to east, the storm ripped up trees and power poles and leveled 25 other houses in Longview, overturned garages and automobiles and blew in plate glass windows. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

Four Hurt at Clanton.
The last reported storm, striking late tonight, injured four persons and leveled 25 other houses in Clanton, near Clanton, Ala. Ambulances were sped to the section. Those hurt were listed as Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sewell and their son and Mrs. Thorne Sewell, 65.

The second most severe wind struck 12 miles northeast of Tuscaloosa, Ala., today, injuring 20 and demolishing more than half a dozen homes. The winds thrust drove a nail through one youth's head.

The sheriff and coroner led an ambulance party into the stricken area. Witnesses who said they heard the storm five minutes before it struck the rural section, attributed the low injury toll to the fact residents fled their homes to safety in forests.

Arkansas Area Swept.
Accompanied by sharp lightning, another windstorm swept through Ashley county, Arkansas, unroofed several stores and farm houses, leveled communications lines and killed several mules. No residents of that section were injured.

A telephone operator said the storm extended into nearby Louisiana. Fury of the wind was centered at Parkdale, of 371 inhabitants, near Hamburg, Arkansas.

In the third storm, a driving wind roared through the business section of Greenville, Miss., carved in a two-story brick building and hurt four men, one seriously.

Laden with heavy guests of rain, the wind swept across the Mississippi river from Arkansas.

Debris Flies Two Men.
It struck first at a bakery plant. Joe Davis, 31, baker, and Everett Houston, 35, truck driver, at work in the building, were pinned beneath debris as the building's rear section crumpled.

Firemen and policemen extricated the men and found Davis in a serious condition from a hip fracture.

TENSION LESSENS AFTER MINISTERS HOLD 2 MEETINGS

Anxious Empire Awaits Momentous Session of Parliament Today To Tell Them What Destiny of British Crown Will Be

INCENSED THRONES BOO CABINET HEADS

Harried Stanley Baldwin Denies Intent To Hurry Edward Into Decision; Wally Rests on Riviera.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—(Monday)—

(AP)—A swift surge of public opinion supporting Britain's King today forced his government to soften its pressure to make Edward VIII choose between his throne and Wallis Warfield Simpson.

The bachelor monarch, it was learned authoritatively, is holding fast to his determination not to give up either his scepter or the American-born divorcee.

These disclosures came suddenly while the anxious empire looked to a momentous session of parliament in the afternoon to tell them what the destiny of England's crown would be.

Tension on the gravest constitutional crisis in the realm's modern history was eased after two sessions of cabinet ministers Sunday.

A huge crowd booed the ministers when they left historic No. 10 Downing street after their last discussion.

Demonstration Significant.
Informed observers believed the popular demonstration on behalf of the hard-pressed sovereign was indicative of how an increasing section of the British populace regards the situation.

Government leaders asserted they were not trying to hurry Edward into a decision, and it has been apparent throughout that the King would not be hurried.

Thus, the stalemate in the crucial game of empire was prolonged beyond the week-end despite eagerness of business leaders and the foreign office for a quick decision.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, arch-foe of any union between the British sovereign and his twice-divorced companion, was to face the house of commons again today, but there Continued in Page 8, Column 1.

WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, AT SEA, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Headling around the easternmost tip of Brazil, the U. S. S. Indianapolis, bearing the President homeward, was 2,705 miles from Trinidad Sunday noon.

The sea was calm, and skies were overcast.

The Indianapolis passed Bahia and was saluted by the Graf Zeppelin, en route to Buenos Aires.

The President attended church services, and several hours later squinted through glasses at a dozen small fishing smacks 50 miles off shore.

One fisherman held up a large fish, tempting the president's eye, but there was no time to try out the spot as three hours had been spent the day before fishing the cove of Rio near Rio de Janeiro. The Indianapolis is due in Port An Spain Friday.

F. D. R. Birthday Balls Set for January 30

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Roosevelt Birthday Balls to aid sufferers from infantile paralysis will be held throughout the nation for the fourth year on January 30, it was announced tonight by Colonel Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the Birthday Balls Committee.

In approving plans for the celebration, Doherty said, the President wrote:

"My own views are that the national fight against infantile paralysis cannot cease. It must go on."

"The recommendations of the trustees (of the Warm Springs, Ga., Infants Paralysis Foundation, to whom plans were referred) have my complete and hearty approval and I am sure that the birthday celebrations in 1937 can be of even increased value to the nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis which is being conducted."

As in the past, Doherty announced, 30 per cent of the proceeds from the balls will be given to the Warm Springs Foundation where the President was treated after he was stricken with paralysis. The other 70 per cent will be devoted to fighting the disease in the communities where the money is raised.

Councilman J. Allen Couch is expected to wage a fight against granting of the broader powers to the mayor-elect, but councilmen have predicted that the incoming mayor will be given another victory by his supporters in the executive body.
Couch, who is chairman of the ordinance committee, was the only dissenter to the committee's recommendations. He held the mayor should serve as ex-officio member of only the hospital board and the board of fire masters. He also contended council should designate the number of committee members.

CONDITION OF POPE SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

passed a comparatively restful night. The asthma with which he also is afflicted was reported to have lessened this morning, when a bulletin said the holy father's condition was "unchanged but with a slight tendency toward betterment."
He gave in today, without any opposition, to the insistent urging of Dr. Amintore Milani that he remain quietly in bed.
But he stubbornly held out against submitting to a medical examination.
At Pope's disposal.
Father Agostino Gemelli, a Franciscan priest and a medical specialist, arrived in Rome and placed himself at the Pope's disposition after being summoned from Milan.

Vatican officials, in calling for him, had hoped he might make a physical examination, which the pontiff had not permitted secular doctors to make.
But the Pope would have nothing of it, and up to tonight Father Gemelli had not succeeded in being admitted to his holiness' presence. He decided to remain in Rome, to be of help if needed.
Thousands of masses were said in Italian churches this morning for the aged church leader and more were recited at afternoon vesper services.
Telegrams arriving from many parts of the world told of special services in other countries.
Donna Camilla Ratti, the Pope's sister, who lives in Rome, visited him in the afternoon for the second time today. His sister-in-law, Signora Ernestina Ratti, and his nephew, Count Franco Ratti, also called in the afternoon.
Donna Ratti Optimistic.
After her morning visit, Donna Ratti declared she felt optimistic over his condition. Many dignitaries of the church and laymen called at the Vatican throughout the day to ask for news of the holy father's illness.
Among them were Prince Ruspoli, grand master of the Order of Hospitallers; Cardinal Lauri, governor of Vatican City, and several members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican.
All were given reassuring replies to their questions.
Hundreds of persons who went to St. Peter's Square today could see the curtains of windows to the Pope's room drawn, but the shutters were opened wide. Throughout the day a light rain pattered against the window pane and dark clouds hung over the Vatican.

Big Brothers Rally More Forces For War Against Yuletide Despair

There shall be no cheerless homes in Atlanta on Christmas Day. That is the creed of Atlanta's Big Brothers, and yesterday their battle against despair, typifying as it does, the desire to help one's fellowman. Numerous challenges have been hurled back and forth among the Big Brothers, and each unit insists that it will accomplish the most.
The latest unit, and a powerful one, is that of Edgar Craighead and Fred C. Hannah. Craighead is teacher of the "Vanguard" Sunday school class at the Peachtree Christian church, and Hannah is an active worker in the same church.
Both insist they are going to top the results of any other Big Brother team.
Along other battlefronts, the concerted forces sound the same battle cry—action. T. W. Tiller, major of the College Park sector, boasts that even the Atlanta area will have to push hard to get more accomplished than he and his cohorts.

And at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night, a rally of all Big Brothers workers will be held at Big Brothers headquarters, 101 Walton street, N. W. This is the meeting that every body is invited to attend.
Your help is necessary if despair is to be erased from a lot of needy homes on Christmas morning.
The big, city-wide sale of the special Big Brothers' edition of The Constitution will be held on Sunday, December 20. Proceeds from the sale of this special edition will be turned into great baskets of good cheer for unfortunate families, on Christmas morning as will funds collected from the fourth annual Big Brothers charity ball, which will be held Thursday, December 17, at the Shrine mosque.
Success of the entire Big Brothers undertaking depends on the help of every citizen.

States plan would emerge from the conference.

No Enthusiasm.
The delegates from Washington voice no enthusiasm over the plan for an American League of Nations suggested by the Dominican republic. It was understood they believed this contained provisions objectionable to the United States policy of "no entangling alliances."

The neutrality plan inspired by President Roosevelt declares the signatories "renew their pledges that any international differences that may arise shall be settled by pacific means."

The permanent committee, consisting of the foreign ministers of the countries concerned, would first assist solely through their good offices and mediation in fulfillment of the American republics' existing obligations for pacific settlement.

Members of the committee, secondly, would provide means by which "the American republics, with full recognition of their juridical equality as sovereign and independent states and general right to individual liberty of action, may take counsel together whenever emergencies arise which affect common interests."

Diplomatic Action.
The signatories would pledge themselves to seek settlement of any American dispute through diplomatic action, commissions of inquiry, conciliation, arbitration and courts of justice, and finally would present the case to the permanent committee which is designed to meet any time at any place, or make high-speed consultations by telephone or telegraph.

The committee could initiate consultative action, remind the disputants of their contractual obligations and offer mediation through usual or special procedure. The signatories would pledge themselves not to resort to hostilities or military action while the committee is acting.

In the event all mediation fails, the signatories would pledge themselves to a policy of common neutrality, embracing exports of arms and ammunition and prohibiting loans or credits to any warring American nation.

Each neutral nation would remain free to impose any trade restrictions it wishes between itself and a belligerent, in the interest of peace.

The draft specifies that nothing in the convention should be considered as interfering with the obligations of any signatory in relation to other multilateral treaties to which it is a party.

Cultural Relations.
The United States delegation also introduced a convention for promotion of cultural relations, which provides for annual exchange of graduate students and professors among all the 21 American republics.

The preamble asserts such an exchange would provide "greater mutual knowledge and understanding of people and institutions, and more consistent educational solidarity on the American continent."

Under the plan each government would nominate a panel of five students and teachers, from which two would be selected by that government. The government would pay all necessary expenses for one year's study in a foreign country.

Each nation also would name a professor, who would be available for lectures, instruction and special research.

All the governments would pledge assistance in the forming of youth groups as labor youth associations, peace societies, and organizations to exchange youths among countries.

by Senator Longenecker, Connecticut Democrat, is scheduled to meet this week to decide whether to hold public hearings in its inquiry into campaign spending.

Early in January the LaFollette committee investigating civil liberties violations will resume its study of alleged strike-breaking, labor spying, and other interference with union activity.

The railroad investigation, buttressed by more than a year of research, is expected to be one of the longest and most complex congressional inquiries since the World War.

It will open with a study of one of America's largest rail networks, the 23,000-mile system controlled by the late Van Sweringen brothers.

First witnesses will include two friends of the Van Sweringens—George A. Tomlinson, Cleveland, Ohio, industrialist, and George A. Ball, Muncie, Ind., glass manufacturer—whose money bolstered the system against the shock of the depression. Also called for the opening session tomorrow are William C. Potter, Harry D. Gibson, of the Manufacturers Trust of New York; L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; E. B. Johnson, chief financial and accounting officer of the Missouri Pacific; William Wyr, secretary-treasurer of that road; Thomas J. Jones, railway attorney, of Cleveland, and John P. Murphy, secretary of Mid-America Corporation, holding company of the Van Sweringen corporations.

Ball and Tomlinson became regents of the $611,000,000 transportation empire when O. P. Van Sweringen died last month. His brother, M. J. Van Sweringen, died a year ago.

Records of the Mid-America Corporation, top holding company in the Van Sweringen's towering corporate pyramid, have been subpoenaed.

Members of the investigating committee are Senators Wheeler, Wagner, Democrat, New York; Shivers, Farmer-Laborite, Minnesota; White, Republican, Maine; Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, and Donahay, Democrat, Ohio.

Emory Speakers Pay Warm Tribute To Life, Service of Bishop Candler

Agnes Scott and Johns Hopkins Presidents To Speak Today.

Emory University will enter the fourth day of its 100th birthday party today after having paid a glowing tribute to Bishop Warren A. Candler, Emory's "grand old man," at a service in the Glenn Memorial auditorium yesterday afternoon.

Bishop Candler, tenth president of Emory College and first and only chancellor of the university, was paid tribute for his many contributions to the life of Emory by Dr. Louis D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church; Bishop William N. Ainsworth, of the North Georgia conference of the Southern Methodist church; William D. Thomson, executive vice president of the Emory board of trustees, and President Harvey Cox. Yesterday morning a special sermon was delivered on "The Mind of Christ" by Dr. William F. Quillian, general secretary of the general board of Christian education of the Southern Methodist church.

Program Today.
The Emory celebration will continue this morning with a meeting on higher education at which Dr. James R. McCain, president of the American Association of Colleges and Universities, will speak on "The Decisive Hour." Dr. Bowman, one of the country's most outstanding educators, will discuss the economic situation of the south and the part higher education must play in future development.

Old Stories Retold.
Stories of old Emory, ranks of students and the influence of the many great men who were connected with the early history of the institution were told to the audience yesterday afternoon by Bishop Candler in a reply to the tributes that had been paid him.

Bishop Candler told of Ignatius A. Few, Emory's first president; Augustus Longstreet, whom he described as the handsomest man he ever knew; Osborn L. Smith, Atticus Haygood, and others. He evoked many ripples of laughter when he described the aptitude his mother had when she gave him a good whipping for playing hooky from a church service as a boy. "She could pick up a switch faster and drop it down quicker in the tenderest spots without provocation of any woman I have ever known," said the bishop.

Many Others to Praise.
He minimized the praise which had been given him by listing the many great men of Emory's history.

"Emory is not finished," said the bishop. "It is only beginning, and her history will be ever and ever greater. There will be many other men whom you can praise."

Dr. Newton said Bishop Candler is especially notable for his efforts to help young people. "He is great also as a statesman, a preacher, a teacher, a writer. He is greatest of all as a philosopher."

Mr. Thomson reviewed Bishop Candler's early efforts to encourage education in Georgia, and his efforts to stimulate individual liberty in gifts to educational causes. He told how the bishop appeared before the general assembly in 1880 to demand eight-month school terms.

"Emory is a permanent tribute to the influence of Bishop Candler," said Bishop Ainsworth, who termed the bishop "the greatest creature that Georgia has ever produced."

He reviewed his activities in the ministry, telling how he has served in nearly every capacity of the Methodist church.

"As a preacher he stands in the front ranks," said Bishop Ainsworth. "The substance of his sermons is superior to that of any other man in the south of his period."

Emory's Creed.
At the morning service, Dr. Quillian outlined Emory's creed in the search for truth.

"Emory University seeks the truth wherever that search may lead," he said. He paid tribute to Emory's stand against false "isms."

"Emory is a Christian institution without religious prejudice," he declared. "It stands for freedom of thought and against all theories that would darken the light of truth."

Through Emory's one hundred years the spirit of Christianity, which means freedom for each man to seek the guidance of a divine motive, has been uppermost," he said.

This week the Emory birthday celebration will begin a series of meetings emphasizing the various phases of activity for which the institution trains students. Today will be for higher education; tomorrow, medicine; Wednesday, law; Thursday, government; Friday, science; Saturday, commerce and journalism. Leaders in each of these activities will speak. All sessions will be held in Glenn Memorial auditorium and will be open to the public without charge.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

MORGENTHAU PLANS TO HALT 'CHISELERS'

Morgenthau Announces Terms of $1,486,652,000 Financing Operations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Announcing terms of a $1,486,652,000 financing operation December 15, Secretary Morgenthau today revamped Treasury borrowing procedure to eliminate "chiselers" he accused of "trying to beat their own government."

Morgenthau shaved interest rates under the comparative lows of recent issues on an offering of bonds and notes to put $300,000,000 of new cash in the government till and meet $1,186,652,000 of maturities.

With the exception of two previous government bond issues, Morgenthau said the interest rates were the lowest in history.

In changing borrowing practice, Morgenthau eliminated a provision of recent offerings requiring the Treasury to accept all subscriptions of $5,000 or less in full.

Although this was designed to give "the other fellow" a chance to invest in government obligations, Morgenthau told a press conference, "that the little fellow has not used it and the big fellow has abused it."

Full Allotments.
He explained that by placing subscriptions through other persons, big investors had managed to procure full allotments of securities.

Ordinarily, Treasury issues are heavily oversubscribed and investors receive only a certain percentage of the securities they seek to buy. To circumvent this, Morgenthau said that certain "chiselers" had split their subscriptions into $5,000 lots and had tendered them through others.

"We had one case where a man ran in 21 members of his family," the secretary said.

"In another case, one bank used all of its clerks. We called up and asked if it was a bona fide offer and they said it was. But in a few days the bonds were back in the market."

He added the Treasury had found it "impossible to police" the $5,000 provision and thus was "stiffening its rules."

For small investors, he said, United States savings bonds were available. Investors desire to procure maximum allotments of government securities, Morgenthau said, because the issues have been selling at a premium and thus can be sold at a profit.

For the December financing, the Treasury offered $700,000,000 of 13-17 year 2 1/2 per cent bonds, the proceeds to provide $300,000,000 of new cash and retire $400,000,000 of bills.

In addition, holders of $357,921,000 of 2 3/4 per cent notes maturing December 15 were offered either the 2 1/2 bonds or five-year 1 1/4 notes in exchange for their holdings. The same offer was made to holders of $428,731,000 of 3 per cent notes maturing February 15.

Morgenthau expressed confidence the issue would be "successful."

With the financing operation, the public debt will cross the $34,000,000,000 line for the first time since last summer, when the total was hiked by bonus borrowing to a record $34,370,000,000.

The new borrowing will increase the debt by $300,000,000 to about $34,140,000,000.

AUSTRALIA WOULD BAR ANY CHILDREN OF UNION

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The Australian government already has drafted a resolution which would bar King Edward's children from accession to the throne in case he abdicates and marries Mrs. Wallis Simpson, a cabinet member told the United Press today.

He added that the resolution would have to be submitted to parliament and that it was designed to concur with possible similar action by the British parliament.

The cabinet members said the Australian government believed the Simpson affair already had damaged the prestige of the British crown to such an extent that it can be restored only by the accession to the throne of the Duke of York.

SEVERE COLD WAVE GRIPS NORTHERN STATES
CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—(AP)—A severe cold wave swept southward through the north central states from the plains of Canada today and was expected to push the mercury to zero and below in almost the entire region by tomorrow.

Forecaster C. A. Donnell predicted the line of zero and subzero temperatures would extend as far southward as central Illinois, northern Missouri and Kansas.

The forecast was for colder temperatures throughout the section except in the Dakotas, where no rise was expected before tomorrow. Little precipitation was predicted except some snow probable in the upper Great Lakes region and the extreme northwestern portion.

Sub-zero weather blew into the United States from northwestern Canada yesterday afternoon. It was felt first in Montana, where the mercury hit 26 below zero at Havre. It spread into North Dakota, with low read-

YORK MAY GET CROWN ON HIS 41ST BIRTHDAY

If Edward Abdicates, Brother Will Become King of Greatest Empire.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—If King Edward VIII abdicates, the Duke and Duchess of York will become king and queen of the world's greatest empire.

The Duke of York, second eldest son of the late King George V, may receive the crown for a birthday present. He becomes 41 years old December 14.

Christened "Albert Frederick Arthur George," the Duke of York may choose any one of these names for the kingdom. The Duchess of York, second most popular member of the British royal family, would become Queen Elizabeth.

The Duke of York would be the 15th British ruler since Scotland united with England in 1603. His two children—Princess Elizabeth, 10, and Princess Margaret Rose, 6, would become next in succession to the throne.

In Battle of Jutland. The Duke of York was born December 14, 1895, at York cottage, Sandringham. He and Edward, who is a year older, were reared together and captained rival cricket teams at Eton.

The Duke studied at Osborne in the naval academy and went to sea in 1912 for six months. He served as midshipman in the first battle squadron during the opening months of the World War. He took part in the battle of Jutland, in 1916, and became a full lieutenant two years later.

In the royal air force he is an air vice marshal.

The Duke of York married Lady Elizabeth April 26, 1923. She was the youngest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne of Scotland and was born Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, August 4, 1900, at Glamis castle, Forfar, Scotland.

The couple met when Lady Elizabeth was 6 years old. After dancing together, a friend said to her: "You dance beautifully together. Perhaps when you are grown up you will marry that little boy."

"When I'm grown up," scornfully retorted Elizabeth, "I'm going to marry a Duke."

Interested in Sports. Both are interested in sports and play fine tennis.

Their marriage followed an intense period of training for the "dainty Duchess," as Lady Elizabeth became popularly known. Every morning at 6:30 she arose and spent an hour studying the history of the royal family, the constitution and intricacies of precedence, formality and dress.

The marriage took place in Westminster Abbey, attended by King George and Queen Mary, with Edward VIII and the Duke of Gloucester acting for the bridegroom. After a short honeymoon the royal couple took up residence at White Lodge, Richmond Park, then moved to 145 Piccadilly, adjoining Hyde Park and Regent's Lane in London.

Their first daughter, Princess Elizabeth, was born April 21, 1926, and was hailed immediately as the "empress's" sweetheart. Since the Princess was first in line of succession to the throne, she began immediately to receive special training fitting her for the high office she may some day hold.

On August 21, 1930, Princess Margaret Rose was born to the royal couple in Glamis castle. Throughout the empire pictures were printed of the model family as an example of married bliss. Although always in the background until recently, the family's popularity has steadily increased.

FREEZING TEMPERATURE IS SLATED EARLY TODAY

Following a scheduled sharp drop of the mercury to a freezing 25 degrees early this morning, the temperature is expected to rise no higher today than 45, it was announced last night by the United States Weather Bureau at Gauley field.

Occasional rains are in prospect throughout today. Yesterday's temperature range was between 40 and 66 degrees.

Prayers Are Asked For Edward, Wally

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(AP)—While every other church in England was offering up prayers today for the King and the royal family, a woman preacher, Maude Hayden, asked her congregation to pray for Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Conducting an undenominational service in Guild House, the preacher said: "I ask everyone to pray for the King and also not to forget the woman whom he loves and who also needs your prayers."

FLORIDIAN KILLS WIFE AND ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 6.—(UP)—Nerves of R. C. Kimball failed him early today after he allegedly shot his attractive young wife to death and he wounded himself only superficially in what police said was a suicide attempt.

Leonora Christwell, his beautiful, estranged wife, died in an automobile with a bullet in her heart. Police said Kimball fired the fatal shot, then turned the gun on himself but lost his nerve.

The shooting occurred as Kimball drove the car of a friend toward a restaurant for sandwiches early today. Friends in a car ahead believed he was shooting only for a joke until they heard the moaning of Kimball's wife as she died.

Constable Fred Newberger termed the case "plainly murder and attempted suicide." Kimball will be given a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Leo Waters Tuesday.

Mrs. Wally Simpson Finds Seclusion in French Villa

En route to Cannes, France, where she found seclusion in the villa of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, of New York, Mrs. Wallis Simpson is shown (extreme right), in this radiophoto as an attendant helped her into her automobile after a luncheon stop in the city of Vienne, France.

Wally, Edward Drawn Together By Gay Life in England's Capital

The life story of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, close friend of King Edward VIII, is continued in this twelfth of a series of articles, in which her meeting with the Prince of Wales is described.

By GERALD DUNCAN.

Wally met Wales. The exact time, the place, the precise circumstances are details that will have to be reserved for her own pen in some distant day if, perhaps, she puts her memoirs into print.

Yet it was inevitable they would meet. The currents of gay London life were sweeping them, certainly one toward the other until they were caught up in the same whirlpool.

It may have been at the court presentation in 1932 when Wally, with ostrich plumes tucked in her impeccable coiffure, curtseyed before their Majesties. That is possible, but improbable because of the austere formality of the ceremony. Royalty is aloof on these occasions.

Chit-chat from the continent drapes a romantic mantle around their meeting. Such chatter has it that the Prince of Wales came upon her in a Paris railway station—a lady in dress with a lot of luggage and not a porter in sight. The story goes that Edward, with characteristic impulsiveness, lifted her bags into a compartment next to his.

"Thank you, sir," she said (so the story goes), and thus Wally was on the road to royal romance, as well as to the life of a woman who would be a tatter of the world's fulfillment.

The more credible version appears to be that they were brought together in a drawing room of Mayfair, or else at a night club where Edward was wont to seek relaxation when he was Prince.

It seems more or less well-established that the timorously English, or her elder sister, Consuelo, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, presented Wally to His Royal Highness about 1933. Both of them, sisters of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, of New York, were close to Wales. They shared his intimate companionship for years. They traveled for weeks at a time in his retinue.

Travelled With Prince. Lady Furness enjoyed many royal favors as the friend of Wales. She was credited with having a tremendous influence over his habits, persuading him to abandon falling off the golf course. She was his private hostess at Fort Belvedere, even as Wally.

Their relationship ended in 1934. An anecdote provides an ironic touch to the parting. It reports that Lady Furness sailed for Bermuda and that Wally saw her off after this little colloquy: "Good-by. Take good care of Darcy for me."

"I will," Wally said. In the late summer of 1934, Wally was in the city of Vienne, France, where she found seclusion in the villa of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, of New York.

Lighted Matches Used To Try To Force Confession, Police Say.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Alfred Mansfield, 38-year-old automobile scrapper of North Baldwin, Long Island, today was held without bail for the grand jury after police said he admitted torturing his diminutive wife with lighted matches in an effort to make her confess indiscretions.

Police Detective Bert Bedell, of Baldwin, said that Mansfield, 6-foot, 200-pound Australian, confessed to placing lighted matches under his wife's fingernails last Friday and beating her with a razor strap.

The prisoner's wife and mother of three children, Mrs. Rose Mansfield, was quoted by Bedell as saying in the last two years she had told her husband of fancied infidelities to protect herself from torture.

Bedell said the woman, who was found limping near her home late yesterday, 24 hours after Mansfield had reported her missing, told him in the past her husband placed lighted matches under her feet, made her stand on one foot, arm outstretched, with heavy books on the palms, and jabbed lighted cigar stubs against her body.

A physician's report, police said, indicated that the woman's body was "covered with welts and bruises."

DEFIANCE OF EDWARD IS ASCRIBED TO WALLY

Mrs. Simpson 'Bucks Up' British Monarch by Telephone in France.

(Copyright, 1936, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(AP)—Over the telephone wires from France comes a voice to expectant ears in Fort Belvedere. It is the voice of Wallis Warfield Simpson, and the eager listener is King Edward VIII.

Once again Mrs. Simpson is "bucking up" the King, stimulating the defiant attitude that caused him to force a showdown after the cabinet presented its demand that he either renounce his love for the former Baltimore belle or abdicate his throne.

Mrs. Simpson has conversed several times with the King on the telephone since she fled to France in the midst of a "constitutional crisis" that has shaken the British empire to its foundations.

In Mayfair, in the West End, in the younger set that moves in the same circles as Edward VIII and Mrs. Simpson, they are saying that it is the young American woman who put spunk into the King, built up his confidence in himself to the point where he openly defied his prime minister and the cabinet.

A traveler in many climes, and accustomed as he is to mingling with people in all walks of life, King Edward has been all his life shy, retiring, the introvert type. Even a King may have an inferiority complex, carried over from his schoolboy days.

"Wally," so her friends say, provided the antidote for that. She could talk to him as no other person could, put him on the back, cajoled him, entreated him, and in time, convinced him that he was in fact a King, a leader of men, a monarch worthy of the adulation of his people.

Edward VIII, responding to this subtle course of treatment, began to take great pride in moving about publicly with a woman companion who could thus inspire him. He liked to be with her, he liked to be seen with her, because he felt she was a woman worthy to be at the King's side—and he realized how much more at ease he felt while in her presence.

If the pressure from the Baldwin cabinet becomes too great, if the King may yet be brought to the decision, by members of his family and by government leaders, that he must place prestige of the crown above his love affair, the democratic King whose heart ruled his head, and the scintillating American woman whose chromium-plated wickerwork released many a royal chuckle?

Too Keen Wally. They say the King has paid attention to many women and that perhaps this romance will go the way of all others, if he elects to sacrifice his crown to his love. For her part, those who observed the development of this romance at close range are inclined to think that it has made a deep impression on the young sovereign and that, if he is compelled to renounce his love for Mrs. Simpson, he will also forswear any future affair of the heart.

Mrs. Simpson, they say, having been thrust into a niche in the history books that falls to the lot of few women, has a deep sense of responsibility toward the King's name and the prestige of the British crown. For her part, it is predicted there would be a life of semi-seclusion, lonely by comparison with his previous gaiety.

Amid all the assorted rumors now going the rounds of London, one that is given much weight is to the effect

WOMAN SUCCUMBS WEEK AFTER MATE

Pneumonia Contracted at Funeral Fatal to Mrs. Anna Connelley.

Mrs. Anna Connelley, 51, died yesterday at a private hospital, a week following the death of her husband. She resided at 551 Luckie street.

Mrs. Connelley contracted pneumonia last Tuesday while she was attending the funeral of her husband, the late Wylie C. Connelley. He had been employed by a national medical concern here for several years.

She was admitted to a private hospital following the funeral, and died yesterday. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock today from the chapel of J. Austin Dillon, the Rev. W. Lee Curtis officiating. Burial will be in Hollywood cemetery.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. M. C. Clowney.

she is close to a nervous breakdown. They said she had aged noticeably in the last few days, but that her suffering was mental rather than physical. She received Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin briefly today.

One friend described Queen Mary's condition in these words: "Queen Mary has cried herself out. Now she seems in a trance, hardly able to realize that all she and King George worked for—all the popularity of the royal family which they devoted a lifetime to fostering—is now crumbling down. Her distress is extreme."

Queen Mary was said to feel now that in view of the King's attitude it might be preferable if he does abdicate for the best interest of the throne.

Before yesterday's talk, the King and Queen sought spiritual guidance and strength from the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Although when the question of Edward's probable abdication first was broached, the Duke of York pleaded that his health would not permit him to undertake the arduous duties of the kingship, he is now ready to do so. He realizes, however, that there is considerable opposition to him among the public on the grounds that he is not properly trained for the kingship.

LAST RITES ARE HELD FOR MISS M. S. ABBOTT

Funeral services for Miss Mary S. Abbott, 65, who died Saturday at a private hospital, were held yesterday at the chapel of Atway & Lowndes, with burial in Crest Lawn cemetery.

Miss Abbott resided at 880 Penn avenue, N. E. She was a former dean of the department of modern languages at Bessie Tift College. For a number of years she was head librarian at Reinhardt and Waleka Colleges.

She was a member of the First Baptist church here.

that Mrs. Simpson's suit for divorce might not have been filed if agreement had not been given to a stipulation raised by Mr. Simpson. This was that, in return for a promise not to contest the suit, he would receive assurance that the King would follow through with the romance and marry Mrs. Simpson. It is reported that, to enforce this condition, Mr. Simpson even threatened to return to the United States to file suit for divorce, bringing King Edward's name into court.

Broiling

Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

Roasting

Gas gives you the oven ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, preventing that flat "steamed" flavor.

Baking

Successful baking results require an unlimited range of oven temperatures evenly distributed. That's why Gas assures light, evenly browned cakes, pies and breads.

Frying

Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat under the skillet—numberless heat variations. Gas gives them all!

Boiling

Faster! Gas brings foods to a boil in 3/4 or less the time of other fuels. Because it is more flexible, it gives you the exact degrees of heat you need.

CONTROL OF RECOVERY PUT ON GOVERNMENT

Responsibility for Control Put on Government by Augusta Speaker.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 6.—(AP)—Responsibility for controlling recovery to prevent another hollow boom and break in security prices was put up to Washington today by Dr. Lionel D. Edie, economist, at the close of the Investment Bankers of America convention.

Asserting bond prices have gone "skyhigh" under the easy money policy pursued by federal authorities the last few years, Edie warned the men who underwrite and sell securities against being made the scapegoats in event of an upturn in interest rates and fall in the investment market.

"Already efforts are being made in Washington to put the blame on private bankers when the turn in money rates comes," he said.

Many of his listeners took this as a reference to the challenge to business before the convention Friday by James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities & Exchange Commission, to share with government the burden of controlling the "new recovery" and to heed the "warning" of the last election.

Edie, member of a New York city firm of consulting economists, declared federal authorities had called a "halt on the bull market in bonds" last summer when the reserve board boosted reserve requirements of member banks of the system 50 per cent to reduce the surplus supply of credit.

He described the board's action as the signal of a broad underlying turn in money conditions, following the decline in interest rates to record low levels, rather than marking an abrupt change. Since then, he noted, treasury obligations have risen to new peaks but attributed this to a "mental lag" in financial circles before significance of money signals is recognized widely.

While forecasting further moves by federal authorities each year to draw the credit strings tighter on rising recovery, Edie interpreted Washington's policy as aimed to stabilize conditions rather than reverse the tide.

But he questioned the power of government, even with reinforced financial controls of federal agencies under the New Deal to "peg" security prices or business.

The association, closing a five-day program, reaffirmed its opposition to limitation of taxes by municipalities on real property and proposed cities as an alternative undertake scientific studies of their tax structures and budgetary control of expenses.

Edward B. Hall, Chicago investment banker, took over leadership of the association from Orrin G. Wood, of Boston.

Named vice president for the coming year were Earle Baile, New York; Rudolph J. Eichler, Los Angeles; James J. Mink, Boston; Claude E. River Jr., New Orleans; and Cloud Wampler, Chicago.

'Last Outlaw' Opens Week's Run at Capitol

The old west on wheels might well be the title of the new, fast-moving shoot-'em-up film which opened for a week's run at the Capitol theater yesterday. R. K. O., the producers, thought "The Last Outlaw" a better name however.

CONSTITUTION OF U. S. IS PRAISED BY SMOOT

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints Holds Conference.

Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in quarterly meeting here yesterday, were admonished by Reed Smoot, former United States senator from Utah and a member of the council of the 12 apostles, to never be found doing anything but upholding the constitution of the United States.

"No church in the nation reveres the constitution more than does our church," Mr. Smoot said, "and I urge you to protect it always as a document inspired by God."

200 Delegates Present.
More than 200 delegates from all sections of Georgia attended the conference, which were held at Bass Junior High school.

The former senator made three addresses during the day. He brought the conference a message from Heber J. Grant, of Salt Lake City, president of the church, and spoke on the theme: "The world is crying for a prophet, and we have one."

Mr. Smoot traced his experiences while in the senate for 30 years and declared he had never lost a friend by his abstention from alcoholic beverages, tea, coffee and cigars.

"I have never eaten a meal without the blessing being asked upon it," he said, "and I have held prayer every night. President Coolidge, on a visit to my home, praised me for it and said his father had always done the same."

Speakers of Day.
Other speakers included Elder LeGrand Richards, president of the Southern States Mission; Elder Leo C. Beck, of Los Angeles, district president for Florida; Elder James R. Boone, of Greenville, Ga., president of the Mississippi district; Elder Ralph R. Tate, of Salt Lake City, mission secretary; Elder Homer Yarn, president of the Atlanta branch, and Elder Wayne R. Robertson, president of the Alabama district.

District President Alma A. Gardner presided. Among those present was Elder Joseph N. Revell, of Los Angeles, missionary in Atlanta. Senator Smoot will leave Atlanta at 8 o'clock this morning. He is at present on a tour of the entire southern mission of the church, comprising the states of Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi. On December 15 he will go to Augusta, Ga., for the dedication of a new church chapel there.

But he questioned the power of government, even with reinforced financial controls of federal agencies under the New Deal to "peg" security prices or business.

The association, closing a five-day program, reaffirmed its opposition to limitation of taxes by municipalities on real property and proposed cities as an alternative undertake scientific studies of their tax structures and budgetary control of expenses.

'MARRIAGE IMPOSSIBLE' NOTED LECTURER SAYS

Church Would Regard Her
as Married to Another, Churchman Claims.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—(UP)—The Rev. Professor Clement Francis Rogers, of the Church of England, educator and lecturer, said in an interview tonight that marriage between King Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson is impossible as the church would regard her as a woman already married to another.

"Everyone here (in the United States) assumes she is the King's mistress," he said. "What the feeling is among the masses of England, I do not know as I have been here for the past three months and it is only in the past week that the English people learned of her existence."

Until recently Professor Rogers held the chair of pastoral theology and liturgics in King's College, London, and was brought here this fall by the Berkeley Divinity school, New Haven. His views on marriage and divorce, among royalty as well as the common people, are fully outlined in one of his books, "Questions in Hyde Park," published in 1924 and twice reprinted.

Cannot Cast Aside.
"Marriage is an indissoluble relationship which cannot, in the eyes of the church and of the Scriptures, be cast aside to make way for a new mate," he said. "The Church of England does, of course, recognize a marriage between one person and another divorced, when the person divorced is innocent. It is for the church to recognize whether the divorced person is innocent."

"Mrs. Simpson is by assumption the innocent party in her recent divorce: as for her first divorce, I do not know."

He warned that in view of recent events, which tend to show that her divorce from Captain Simpson was planned so she might marry the King, under English law her final decree should not be granted.

"The King is planning to marry a woman who is still another man's wife," he said.

Majority Favor Church.
"The English people would enjoy seeing their monarch marry a commoner, American or English, provided she is fresh. Please disabuse your mind that the English protest is based upon her American activity, for I think they would enjoy his marrying an American for sentimental reasons."

Asked what attitude the masses would take toward the stand of the church in the matter, he replied: "I do not believe it is apt to lead to disestablishment of the church, for I think the majority agree with the church. I must point out, however, that this means the head of the church only in legal and secular matters, not in spiritual matters. We have no head of the church in spiritual matters other than the Supreme Being among his equals."

"As secular head and a son of the church on the secular side, the King is amenable to its laws."

MAN IS KILLED.
ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Dec. 6.—(AP)—Oscar L. Euler, 23, of Jacksonville, was accidentally shot and killed today by a hunting companion. A coroner's jury held the companion, George Akina, of Jacksonville, was blameless.

DEATH IS PROBED.
SUFFERN, N. Y., Dec. 6.—(AP)—Police of the near-by township of Ramapo today investigated what they described as strange circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. David McConnell Jr., former Texas girl and daughter-in-law of a millionaire New York perfume manufacturer.

My Day

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Friday.—As I haven't time to ride I am trying to train Jack, my setter dog, to walk in the streets. I came down Connecticut avenue yesterday at a pace which I certainly would not have held had I been entirely on my own steam, but with a large red setter dog at the end of the leash I made very good time.

It was grey and looked like snow all day Thursday. But Friday was a gorgeous day. Blue sky and not too cold. I drove down to a place about fifteen miles this side of Richmond to visit two friends of mine, an American and a Russian, who is now an American citizen.

The American has been studying in Richmond in order to get a degree which will enable her to teach some of the social sciences. She has had all the practical experience necessary, for she worked in Russia eight years for the Quakers. Came back for a holiday, found conditions in this country very interesting and settled down to work for the Quakers again in the mining regions of West Virginia. Later she was made welfare commissioner for the county and headed most of the emergency relief work.

This is where I first knew her and I think I was attracted to her primarily because of the fact that, even though she was a Quaker, she could show righteous indignation. Some very charming ladies who had spent a short time in Russia were telling her the virtues of the Russian system one day. And, to my keen amusement, she completely lost her temper and practically told them they knew nothing about it.

She finally resigned her job because of political pressure, but I think of no one I would rather have young people study with, for she could illustrate from personal experience many of the theories which mean so little when taught from books.

There was very little traffic on the road and we made good time. Our directions were so good, we found the house without any difficulty. Lunch was ready on our arrival and we had Russian tea, which always seems to me like my own special brand. And those very delicious rolls filled this time, with ham and cabbage, though they can be filled with anything you desire.

They had another Russian staying with them who took out her guitar and sang one or two Russian songs which had been favorites of Count Tolstoy. Then we walked along the banks of a charming little river and it was time to start back for Washington.

Here we are again after a really delightful day.

Elaborate O. E. S. Party Is Given.

One of the largest and most elaborate O. E. S. affairs of the year was the recent party given by Georgia Chapter No. 127, the home chapter of the worthy grand matron, Mrs. Pauline Dillon.

Honor guests were the entire grand family, including the elected and appointed grand officers of Atlanta and Chattahoochee districts, and the past matrons' clubs from 1929-1936, inclusive.

After a business meeting the chapter was open to the public and many friends who were not members of the order enjoyed the program. The program included a black face quartet, song and dance numbers, and the distribution of gifts to the honor guests by "Doney" played by Miss Nettie Mae Callaway. Every member of the grand family was remembered with an elaborate gift from the worthy grand matron, and every other honor guest was remembered with gifts from Georgia chapter officers, corresponding with their own station.

The worthy grand matron was also the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Songs were rendered by Mrs. Lavert Mitchell, with Mrs. Hamilton as accompanist. A black face reading by Mrs. Mitchell's daughter, LaNette, was also a feature of the evening.

Contract Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily installments.

THE OPENING SUIT BID OF ONE.

The opening suit bid of one is the ideal bid. Rarely will the best final contract be apparent at the start of the hand, and the opening one bid in a suit allows for the greatest possible exchange of information while keeping the bidding at the lowest possible level for purposes of both strategy and safety.

Although it is the lowest bid, a one bid does not show the weakest possible opening hand, particularly honor tricks. The playing strength of the hand is a secondary consideration compared to the vital necessity for making the opening bid show a fixed minimum number of defensive winners. This minimum should be better than an average share of all the honor tricks around the table. According to the Rule of Eight, there usually are eight or eight and a half honor tricks in all. Therefore, the honor trick requirements for an opening suit bid of one are two and a half honor tricks, and more often the hand will contain three honor tricks or more.

The number of expected trick winners in the hand, while theoretically of equal importance, does not require any effort in counting on the part of the opening bidder. Any hand containing two and a half to three honor tricks and a fair biddable suit will simultaneously count to about four winners, which are enough for an opening suit bid of one. Finally, the hand should contain a biddable suit, in which the opening bid will be made.

The bidding:

North East South West
1 club Pass 1 spade Pass
1 tr. trump Pass 2 hearts Pass
3 spades Pass 3 spades (final bid)

North should have rebid two no trump, but even had he done so South probably would have played the hand at three spades.

With both of the major suits bid declarer has a number of trumps to coin between the two minors. It was true that North had started with a club bid which, in the mind of many opening leaders, would have dictated a diamond suit as the only alternative, but this particular West player was one who has a strong aversion to leading from queens. (Not a bad aversion, by the way. It is shared by many players who are acknowledged brilliant opening leaders.) On this particular hand, however, West hardly could have foreseen how beautifully his selection of a club would result. Declarer won with the jack and led a spade toward dummy, taking the jack finesse. When it held, he thought of the ace, and then he considered ways and means of re-entering his own hand. Not knowing who had the heart ace, he laid down dummy's queen, but since West could not count on declarer's difficulty he held off this trick. At this point declarer would have been wiser to have led to his singleton Jack of Diamonds, but he continued with hearts, and his nine lost to West's jack. West promptly threw the dummy back on lead with a club.

Declarer could count, of course, that a round of clubs would be ruffed, and, therefore, did what he should have done before. He led a low diamond from the king. East ducked, and West won with the queen. A third club followed, and East ruffed. A heart return, won by West's ace, and the lead of West's last heart did the trick. East ruffed with his last trump and the contract was defeated.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

Question.—Is the European form of contract bridge just the same as the American form?

Answer: Yes. In France, however, both contract and a very similar game, called Plafond, are played.

INSTALLMENT II.

"It's not an unhappy love affair," said Arlen in a husky voice. "It's my home—something closer to me than a love affair. It involves my father and my mother. Now you think I'm a silly girl who resents her father's marriage just because it is a second marriage. No, it's more than that. I remember the mother who is exactly three years my senior because she married my father for his money. If she had loved him, I could have gotten over the hurt of seeing some other woman take my mother's place. But Karen . . . She paused, remembering Karen's sulky beautiful face. "Not only doesn't she love him, she won't be faithful to him. I, she drew in her breath, "I hate it."

"And what was your home, he said thoughtfully, "and has become a hotbed of misunderstanding and lies. And there's always the question of money."

"My father isn't wealthy," Arlen said earnestly. "All the money he has inherited from my mother. Do you see?" She turned a troubled face to him. "Karen is living on my mother's money, living with everything my mother cherished and loved. Last night when she came down flaunting mother's pearls, I couldn't stand it. I made a frightful scene at the table. I lost my temper. Oh, it was awful! And this morning I drove down here to cool off. But I haven't cooled off. It's not only Karen, you see, wearing my mother's jewels, but my father is making such a fool of himself and hating me."

"Are you going back?" he asked. She looked away. "I don't know what I'm going to do. Father told me not to come back until I could respect his wife's respect for that cheap woman. I can't! I haven't very much money."

He shot a quick glance at her. "There's marriage, you know."

"Yes," she said gravely. "There's a boy at home who wants to marry me. But I don't want to marry him. I've lived. If I marry Philip, I'll feel it's the end of my life. Marriage shouldn't do that. It should be the beginning. She smiled. "I've always had such nice illusions about love and marriage. I want to keep them. I don't want to marry for security because I'm afraid of life—or for a refuge. Do you understand? I'm sorry for talking so much. All this can't possibly interest you."

"But it does, tremendously," he took her hand and looked at her. "I'm going to suggest a solution. You can't go back home to stay. It's out of the question. Sooner or later you'd run away as you have this time. You don't want to marry a boy as a refuge, and you want all your pretty illusions made real. I have a sister in New York," said Renny, "who needs a social secretary. She has a passion for entertaining and she's always losing addresses and telephone numbers, and neglects her correspondence miserably. She's rich enough to pay you a good salary. You'd be more than a secretary. Louise has a fair gold-mother streak in her and she'd undoubtedly show you a good time and introduce you to no end of people."

"It sounds too good," said Arlen, brightening at once. "Who is she?"

"Louise's husband, Richard Brandon," he said, and smiled at her eagerness. "He has his fingers in several prosperous industries."

"But I don't know the first thing about being a secretary. . . ."

"And she won't know the first thing to do with one. I'll write her tonight and after she has taken you to parties and led you a merry chase, you may be able to make up our mind about the boy at home."

"No, I couldn't. It wouldn't be fair! She pushed her blowing hair from her face. "I couldn't have hoped for a solution that sounds so adventurous and exciting," Arlen laughed. "Are you going back home after you've finished tucking Mr. Winstead in bed?"

Renny smiled again. "I came to see him on business. He's an astonishing old soul. He heads a large corporation but his men manage it while old Winstead nods in his desk chair. He doesn't know the first thing about the papers he signs, but he refuses to retire and nothing can pass without his trembling signature. I'm going back in a few days. I'm afraid his valet will have to tuck him in after that."

"Back where?"

"To New York."

"You live there, too?"

"When I can't get away. Shall we go back now?"

"Where I'll spend an absolutely sleepless night thinking kind providence sending you here for one of Mr. Winstead's trembling signatures."

"Not sending me to Mr. Winstead," Renny corrected gently. "Sending me to you."

Standing beside the door of her room, her coat off one bare shoulder, she said seriously, "There is a reason why you understand, particularly why you understand women so well. But I shall never ask you."

He grinned handsomely in the half light of the narrow hall.

"I'm sorry. Your confidence really deserves mine."

He turned and went to his room, leaving Arlen to a sleepless night in a strange bed, weaving hazy dreams of a new life. In those deep-set eyes, that were blue and smiling, the very masculine gesture of putting his pipe between his teeth. Dawn was breaking over the ocean and making colors on the water when excited exhaustion brought her to sleep.

Renny wrote to Louise of Arlen's domestic difficulties. Knowing her, he did not expect her to either understand or sympathize. He wrote:

"I could send her to you as your guest because she'd be a credit to you and your famous parties. But she's too young to accept and insists upon working for her keep. No romantic impulse prompts this noble gesture of mine, my dear Louise. She's a beautiful girl with plenty of spirit, and you know so many unattached young men. Perhaps after a sophisticated fling she'll settle down with the practical youth who obviously bores her. I am, as you know, twice removed from any romantic feelings toward any woman, even one as lovely as Arlen Leeds."

"Did you see Christa abroad this summer? Probably at a bar with her latest annexation. Allison is still with mother in Maine. She's fine. I'll call on you when I get to New York."

"Arlen will probably have to have the final scene at home, and her poor frustrated father who married a gold-digger will think she's met the Big Bad Wolf in a white linen suit who is going to lead her to perdition."

During the next few days, while Renny tried to coax a signature from Mr. Winstead, Arlen had leisure to contemplate what was finished and what was about to begin. There were few devoted ties to sever, when she accepted this unusual offer. Renny had made. From the past she would take only the sweet memory of an orphaned mother and the memory of an orphaned father. Her friends would miss her a little. Most of them were planning either trousseaux or layettes, having made comfortable niches for themselves in cozy apartments, and suburban cottages.

Arlen, at 21, had often been a bridesmaid, and most of the brides she had attended had flung their bouquets at her, over white staircases. But there was not one man among her wide acquaintance who stirred her in the least, no man whose presence made her a little breathless or whose approach caused her heart to leap. Her safely married friends said, "You'll get over that, my dear," but she knew she never would. Love could not be a dull smug thing. It had to be high breathless ecstasy. It had to make the world whirl around your head. It had to sweep you, make an ardent flame in you.

Philip . . . she would miss him, most of all, his companionship, his loyalty, his devotion. While he declared there was no other girl for him, he would marry a girl who appreciated his fine practical qualities and live in a lovely house furnished by his wealthy parents. Lacking imagination, high ecstasy to Philip meant home and home fires and the sight of Arlen's yellow head.

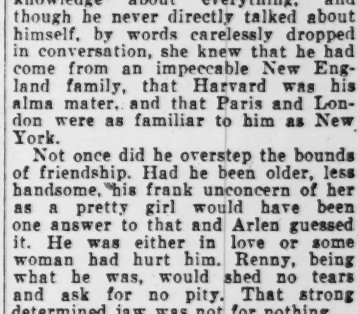

Although she was with Renny a great deal, although they talked both sense and nonsense while they swam or sat on the beach or walked the boardwalk at night, she had never been able to prick the invulnerable armor he wore. He was by far the most amusing and interesting man she had ever known. He had a wealth of knowledge about everything, and though he never directly talked about himself, by words carelessly dropped in conversation, she knew that he had come from an impeccable New England family, that Harvard was his alma mater, and that Paris and London were as familiar to him as New York.

Not once did he overstep the bounds of friendship, and he been older, less handsome, his frank unconcern of her as a pretty girl would have been an answer to that and Arlen guessed it. He was either in love or he was a womanizer, but Renny, being what he was, would shed no tears and ask for no pity. That strong determined jaw was not for nothing.

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

He does his reading at the newsstand.

It's not that we mind people being interested in news. But the fellow who monopolizes a newsstand for hours at a time. He reads all the front-page stories from start to finish in all the papers, and we can't even get our nose in edgewise. He seems to forget that other people like to read the headlines in the papers they don't take. He's too busy for that. He pushes a few pennies in under his elbow so that you can buy a paper. . . . it's just something he doesn't understand about.

When we encounter this omnivorous creature at a newsstand we are always tempted to nudge him and say, "Which paper do you recommend today, Mack?" But somehow we're afraid he might not respond nicely.

We've decided that the best way to handle him when he is in the way is to sneak in behind him and give him a crack in the back of the knees. There's nothing like that to knock the pins from under an undesirable character. But if it's in the way, we've been in letting him be. Anyone who can get news without half trying ought to be endowed.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

THE STORY OF IRON AND STEEL

I—In Ancient Times.

A century ago, an iron blade was found in one of the pyramids of Egypt. The age of the pyramid is believed to be about 5,000 years, and the blade of iron proof that iron was used by people at the time the pyramid was built.

The art of iron-working was known long ago in eastern Asia, as well as in countries around the Mediterranean sea. The Chinese made iron tools at least 3,000 years ago. At Delhi, India, there are records of the use of wrought-iron parts welded together. The iron pillar looks a good deal like a telegraph pole, but never was used for that purpose. It is believed to have been set up 1,500 years ago.

The "furnaces" used for iron-making in early times seem queer to us. In many cases they were little more than heaps of iron ore and wood or charcoal. Some were fitted with bellows which blew air upon the fire, and made it burn more fiercely.

When smelting was done without a bellows, the fire was lighted on a hill, where wind would give force to the flames.

The lumps of iron obtained in olden times were small compared with what we produce in a steel mill nowadays. As a rule, the lumps weighed from 5 to 60 pounds apiece, though it seems that a lump as heavy as a weight of a hundred pounds was obtained now and then. Iron was rather costly. On the island of Crete iron was used for making jewelry and in Greece it was at one time used as money.

Lanier's Protest of Riverside Team Ruled 'Out of Order'

No matter how many beautiful Christmas ties Coach Bernie Moore receives at L. S. U., he won't like any of them.

He will dislike all ties because of that inexplicable Texas tie he and his team received early in October.

Old Lou's football team believes in getting right down to work.

They never worry around with any warm-up games but open up with major league foes, continue with them, and see what happens.

And to this very good day they are wondering down at Old Lou just what happened on October 3, down at Austin in the Lone Star state.

Old Lou was playing Texas, not a tough team, and Texas earned a tie because the boys from Old Lou fumbled 15 times and Texas recovered 13 of the fumbles. The Baton Rouge eleven wasn't organized. It was having an off-day. And it got tied.

On any other Saturday it would very likely have won with something approaching ease.

In 1935 the L. S. U. eleven opened up with Rice. And an official's disputed decision called back an L. S. U. touchdown which would have given them a 14-to-10 victory. As it was they lost, 10 to 7.

They never have any luck out in Texas. But that record of 15 fumbles with 13 of them going to the other eleven is something else.

Regardless of that tie, L. S. U. must rank with other great teams produced in the south. The 1936 team which was undefeated in the conference and out of it, suffering only the Texas tie, rates with Alabama's fine Rose Bowl teams and with Tech's. And with the Tulane team of 1931.

And Bernie Moore has done one of the really fine jobs of coaching. They thought when he followed Biff Jones in there after one of the Huey Long squalls, that he'd have a difficult time filling Biff Jones shoes.

If they meant filling Biff Jones' shoes they were right. Because Biff Jones had a pair of feet which required a lot of shoe. In fact, they used to just knock the horns off a couple of cows, tan the hide, put them in shape and put them on Biff Jones' feet.

But if they meant filling his figurative coaching shoes they were all wrong. Bernie Moore has had the best success any L. S. U. coach has ever had.

THREE FOOTBALL TEAMS.

Football, that is to say championship football, is no longer played with one football team. Bernie Bierman has demonstrated that at Minnesota and Bernie Moore has done the same at L. S. U.

Alumni, yapping at their coaches who have a squad of 30 men and perhaps one pretty fair team to play, might think on that.

It is doubtful if any varsity player on the L. S. U. eleven was forced to play more than 20 minutes in any one game.

Bernie Moore has the material and he knows how to use it. He teaches a good, sound brand of football. He doesn't have to teach a lot of fancy stuff because he has the power to run and pass and that's the best football after all.

He goes in for blocking. He knows blocking wins football games more than does any other single factor.

And now his team moves into the Sugar Bowl game which will probably decide the national championship. And the entire south will be pulling for the lads from Baton Rouge.

Did you ask if there was a Rose Bowl game? There is. A couple of teams which have been defeated and tied are playing in it. Pittsburgh, the eastern team, was tied by Fordham and defeated by Duquesne. Fordham, outplaying Pitt, later was defeated by N. Y. U. which had lost, 60 to 0, to Ohio State.

CHASING RABBITS.

That rabbit which was turned loose between halves of the recent Army-Navy football game at Philadelphia, recalls a couple of rabbits who brought blushes to the faces of some civic-minded young men a dozen years ago at Nashville, Tenn.-O-See.

The big league clubs were heading north and the Yankees were scheduled for a game at Sulphur Dell, home of Those Vols. New York baseball writers, on the way home, had been regaling their leaders with stories of the towns in which they played. And the references were not always kind, having to do with the smallness of the towns, the rural ball parks and so on and so forth.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, or some similar organization, met the New York writers in Nashville; entertained them and tried to show them they were visiting a city.

That afternoon, as the Yankees took the field for practice, with some 10,000 people in the stands; the Yankee outfielders scared up a couple of rabbits which went scampering across the field with several Yankee players in hot pursuit.

And all the stories featured the rural scene of major league ball players chasing rabbits in the Nashville baseball park. The promoters of civic pride were fit to be tied and if THEY could have caught those rabbits they would have made hash of them very, very quickly.

THE PROPER DECISION.

Action of the G. I. A. A. executive committee yesterday in refusing to allow a post-season protest on the eligibility of two players, one a substitute, on Riverside Academy's championship football team, was proper and just.

The substitute had played only a few minutes during the entire season and had not been a factor in deciding the championship. Riverside, as an honest member of the institution, had no information regarding the alleged ineligibility of the players and most certainly would not have used them for even a few minutes had they known it.

The effort, delayed until the championship was won, to dig up some evidence of ineligibility, did not smack of good sportsmanship in that a date had been set for such presentation. And none was presented. The very fine American Legion baseball efforts almost have been destroyed by similar tactics. The G. I. A. A. committee is to be congratulated. The opposing teams should congratulate the champions. Post-season protests are never in good form.

LANDIS MAY QUIT BEFORE JANUARY MICKELSON SAYS

Scribe States Judge Is Ready To Retire After 16 Years as Czar.

By Paul Mickelson.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP)—King Edward VIII last, the only monarch who soon may abdicate his throne. Baseball's high majesty, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, may abdicate on or before completion of his 16th year as all-powerful czar of America's national game next January.

A combination of circumstances and events strongly indicate the gruff, iron-willed boss of horsehide may quit, but don't think for a minute that such abdication would be involuntary. The old judge doesn't scare worth a base on balls. When he leaves it'll be because he so wills.

The truth is that Landis, now 70 years old, but in his best health in many seasons, is getting very much fed up with the vacillating baseball nabobs he has bluffed and licked since 1921 with his power and ultimatum. The celebrated Feller case has opened his piercing blue eyes to lots of things that apparently escaped his notice and the man on the throne, we learn from high authority, is in the mood to take his hat off the hook and go home.

MAY BE FIRED.

Current rumors, afloat wherever baseball men gather, are that the judge may be fired if he rules Bob Feller, sensational schoolboy pitcher of the Cleveland club, a free agent on the charge that Cleveland violated the sand lot rule. It is hard to believe those rumors despite the fact that major league clubs, with their far-flung, from packing to the minor leagues, which are supposed to be fighting for a principle against Cleveland in the Feller case. Commissioner Landis lost his first fight in almost 16 years Thursday at Montreal when the minors voted down his proposed rider to the Baltimore amendment—a rider that would force baseball men recommending players, to send in full information on those recommendations to the commissioner's office. Many interpreted the rejection as a sign on the wall that Landis would get the royal bounce unless he played ball as the big league club owners desired.

The rejection probably made the old judge sore, and may supply him with another reason in a desire to quit. But firing him? It's hard to believe. Several years ago, the judge's club owners were burned up by a few of the judge's decisions and decided to fire him, saving his $50,000 a year salary and centering his duties back to the old commissioner of three men. They called Landis on the carpet.

GETS NEW CONTRACT.

What the judge told them, no club owner would say. Anyway, the judge strolled out on the meeting two hours later with a new contract at $65,000 annually in his hip pocket.

Any person, including high officials of the Cleveland club, who say they know what Landis is going to do in the Feller case, is merely guessing. He, alone knows. And he is in charge of public information on colonies in the Cleveland administration, he says, he learned to keep his mouth shut and he had something to say. "He'll talk about everything except baseball."

Commissioner Landis is doing plenty of roaring as he searches for facts. A minor league club owner tells this one:

The commissioner called in a minor league club owner, whom we shall call X, and asked him if he had sold or sent players to a major league club, which we shall call A, before.

"No never," replied X.

The commissioner then called in Y. "Did you ever buy or get players from X before?" asked Landis.

"Why yes," replied A.

"Someone in this room," roared Landis, "is a liar."

BOSTON, PACKERS TO VIE FOR TITLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP)—It's Boston against Green Bay's mighty Packers for the National Professional Football League championship.

The Redskins from New England brought an end to the four-year reign of the New York Giants as eastern division champions today by winning a 14-0 decision over the New Yorks in mud and rain at the Polo Grounds.

The title victory qualified the Redskins to take the Packers, western section crownholders, for the league title next Sunday, either in New York or Boston. The winner will succeed as titleists the Detroit Lions, who wound up their season with a 14-6 win over Brooklyn today, a victory which did them no good, since they had been previously eliminated from the race.

In the only other game on the season's final scheduled program, the Packers, who clinched the western division title a week ago, finally won a scoreless tie with the lowly Chicago Cardinals.

Boston's superior weight, and the all-around defensive work of Bill Turk Edwards combined to conquer the Giants, as 17,000 soaked spectators looked on. Needing at least a tie to take the eastern title, the Redskins wound it up this time by scoring twice to win.

An intercepted pass by Edwards set up the first touchdown, and a 74-yard return of a punt by Cliff Battles provided the second.

The win was the seventh in the Redskins' 12 regular starts.

The Lions won their eighth victory in a dozen scheduled games by scoring in each of the first two quarters against the Dodgers. A crowd of 11,000 turned out to see the ex-champions stage two long, sustained drives for their touchdowns.

HEAVY TRADING SEEN AS MOGULS GATHER TUESDAY

Feller Decision, Possible Dean Sale Expected at Major Conclave.

By George Kirksey.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Officials of every major league club except the world champion New York Yankees will engage in the heaviest player trading in several years when they gather at the annual winter meeting Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. It was indicated today.

Each club except the Yankees has one or more deals on the fire.

A brief survey of the situation with each club follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

YANKEES—Will stand pat!

TIGERS—Covet a shortstop and right-handed hitting outfielder. Outfielders Goslin and Pete Fox both on the trading block. Billy Rogell likely to be used as bait in a deal for a new shortstop.

WHITE SOX—Need another catcher, a third baseman and pitcher. Pitcher John Whitehead likely to go to Tigers.

INDIANS—Want a third baseman and catcher. Deal on the way with the Browns for Catcher Rollie Hemery. Also trying to land Third Baseman Pinky Higgins in a three-cornered trade with the Athletics and Red Sox.

SENIORS—Seek a catcher, pitcher and another outfielder. Catcher Bolton and Outfielders Sington, Hill and Reynolds on the block. Also willing to peddle Pitcher Earl Whitehead.

RED SOX—Need outfielders and pitchers. May trade Third Baseman Bill Werber to the Athletics for Higgins, and then send the latter to the Indians for Outfielder Joe Voshick. Considering fancy offer from Cleveland for Catcher Rick Ferrell.

BROWNS—In for a complete shake-up, with Manager Rogers Hornsby willing to trade any player on club. May use Shortstop Lary in deal with the Indians. Outfielder Julian Solters and Catcher Hemery both likely to go elsewhere.

ATHLETICS—Seek pitchers. Likely to use Higgins in a deal with Red Sox for Werber.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

GIANTS—After a third baseman, catcher and another outfielder. Almost certain to dispose of Outfielder Hank Leiber.

CARDINALS—Want more pitching strength. Dizzy Dean still on block but exorbitant demands have temporarily cooled off all deals for him. If Dean goes almost certain that deal will be made for Van Mungo.

CUBS—Need right-handed hitting outfielder. Still attempting to get Leiber from Giants without giving up Third Baseman Hack.

PIRATES—Seek pitchers. Willing to part with Outfielders Woody Jones and Dan Hafee, and Catcher Tom Padden. No. 1 candidate to get Dizzy Dean if he's traded.

REDS—After outfielder and pitcher. Dickifier for Wally Berger, of Bees, and Leiber.

BEES—Need pitchers, extra infielder and outfielder. May trade Berger.

DODGERS—Need catcher and pitchers. Willing to trade anyone, even Van Mungo if right players can be found.

PHILLIES—After everything. Have couple of pitchers and an outfielder they may use as trading material. Pitchers Joe Bowman and Orville Jorgens sought by several clubs.

ROSSI TO MEET MILLER TONIGHT

Count Pedro Rossi, fortified with a new assortment of wrestling tricks and with his ever-present negro valet, takes on Jimmy Miller, Assyrian mat wrestler, in the feature match at the Spring Street arena tonight.

Miller has sought a match with Rossi for several weeks, promising to take on the Count in any time he is in town. He says he will not accept Rossi's apology for the incident, but intends to put an abrupt halt to the Count's winning streak.

Which, he says, is his way of settling such matters.

Gleann Cowan, wrestling member of the Atlanta police force, will take on a tough assignment meeting Joe Wilard, of Nashville, in the semi-windup.

John Dameron, Atlanta, has been matched with Young Gotch, Miami, in the opener.

The Spring Street arena is located at the junction of Spring, Peters and Garnett streets.

The first bout gets underway promptly at 8 o'clock.

East Lake Dogfite Won With 123 Score

Ten foursomes participated in the weekly dogfite tournament Sunday afternoon on the East Lake course. The winning foursome turned in a score of 123. They were Dr. H. W. Ridley, Dr. O. O. Lynch, Dr. H. P. McDonald and E. F. Emmel.

Second prize went to Jack Robertson, George Fogg, Dr. M. F. Fowler and S. H. Rade with a 125. Third at 126 were: J. C. Kyle, S. P. Murray, D. G. Freeman and A. G. Huston. Cliff Haley, M. Perkins, H. H. Arnold and Dr. J. R. Mitchell came in fourth with 127.

Aided for last honors at 128 were: J. D. McConnell, A. C. Spinks, John Longman, L. U. West and Harold Sargent. Clyde Fowler, Robert Ingram and Ray Williams.

2 Titles in 2 Years for Moore

When the late Huey Long disposed of "Biff" Jones as head football coach at L. S. U. he appointed in his place, Bernie Moore, assistant football coach and former Mercer track mentor. And all that Mr. Moore has done in his two years as coach is guide his Bengals to two undisputed South-eastern conference titles, and two successive invitations to the Sugar Bowl. Which is quite a record in any man's league.

Tech Begins Work For California Tilt

Jackets Determined To Close Out Season With Victory Over Bears Here.

By Ralph McGill.

Georgia Tech's football team begins work this afternoon for the intersectional game with California's surprising Berkeley Bears, who were the greatest November team on the coast.

The game is to be played on December 26, the day following the appearance of Santa Claus and his reindeer team.

A Christmas tree and presents for both teams will be a part of the program arranged for Christmas Eve.

The Jackets, ranked as the nation's most disappointing team, are determined to close out their season in a manner emphatic enough to remove at least the memory of that ranking.

California is bringing 33 players and three coaches to the Atlanta game.

Last Saturday's game, which ran almost to schedule except for Mississippi's rather unexpected tie with Tennessee, closed out the southern football schedule with the exception of the South Carolina-Miami game on December 11 and the Tech-California game on the 26th.

SUGAR BOWL.

Chief interest in the south centers in the Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans on January 1 and the Cuban sports festival game on the same date in which Auburn and Villanova meet.

Southern football fans were, of course, disappointed in the selection of Pasadena over L. S. U. for the Rose Bowl game. The latest story out of Pasadena which has gained credence in the south is that "bowl jealousy" had a part in determining the choice of Pitt.

Had L. S. U. gone to the Pasadena game the Sugar Bowl game, which is a tremendous success despite the fact it is but two seasons old, would have had Pitt and Alabama. And all the eastern publicity would have been put on the Sugar Bowl game.

The Rose Bowl committee is reported to have believed that if Pitt were chosen the Rose Bowl game would receive all the publicity and that the south would demand Alabama and L. S. U. in the Sugar Bowl and it would be a sectional game, attracting little or no national interest.

Rose Bowl People Daffy, Lardner Says

Sugar Bowl Tilt Championship Affair, He States.

By John Lardner.

(Copyright, 1936, by the North American Publishing Alliance, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—In a comical world where the Rose Bowl game is played in the Sugar Bowl and the runner-up for the city championship of Pittsburgh plays a tied and beaten team in the Rose Bowl—well, in a world like that, Dizzy Dean may well be sold to the Phillies for the waiver price.

But probably he won't be. Baseball people are much more frosty and level-headed than football people. And of all football people, the Rose Bowl people are the daffiest. I think you are giving them the best of it when you refer to their mental processes as peculiar. They have kicked the so-called "national championship" game right out of their own gar-

CRACKERS TO GET 2 PLAYERS TODAY FROM ATHLETICS

Atlanta To Buy Outfielder, Obtain Infielder From Mack.

By Jack Troy.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Dec. 6. The deals that will make the Crackers stronger than any club under the Earl Mann-Eddie Moore regime will be completed tomorrow at Philadelphia.

President Earl Mann talked with Connie Mack, Athletic manager, over long distance today and arranged to complete the deal tomorrow.

They involve purchase of an outfielder and acquisition of a first-class second baseman on option. When these deals are put through, only one more matter of club business will remain.

That involves the purchase of another pitcher. The pitcher deal is virtually complete and will give Atlanta one of the strongest hurling corps in the Southern league.

President Mann and Manager Moore have served notice to the other seven clubs. The two Cracker officials went to the annual minor league meeting at Montreal with the avowed intention of rounding up a ball club that would make a stirring bid to bring Atlanta its third straight pennant.

STRONGEST CLUB.

And when President Mann leaves Philadelphia tomorrow—Manager Moore has long since returned to his winter quarters at Sarasota, Fla.—the Cracker club will be, as said, the strongest since Mack became president and Moore became manager.

The Crackers are going to have one of the more promising youngsters already under contract in one of the outfield positions. Gerald McQuig, former Mercer athlete, and Red Pittman, who was purchased earlier in the year from Andalusia, Ala., will be given a shot at the job.

McQuig apparently is the more promising. Only trouble with eyesight has held him back, and it seems that visits to Atlanta specialists have remedied all that. He still is on tour of Puerto Rico with an all-star baseball team.

As matters now stand, the Crackers will have Marshall Mauldin in center. The outfielder to be secured tomorrow in either right or left and one of the youngsters in the remaining position.

1937 INFIELD.

The infield will include Johnny Hill at third, Buster Chatham at short, the player to be secured on option tomorrow—was a great one in his own league last season—at second base, and Alex Hooks on first.

It remains to be seen whether Hooks can hit as well the third season in the same league. He sort of fell down in batting in his second year with the Crackers and did not burn the league up in fielding.

He has the great knack of catching balls thrown to him by any first baseman in the league, but he is uncertain on certain types of ground balls. Hooks is something of a question mark.

The understanding is that the Crackers have lined out for another first baseman should Hooks fail to produce. He'll be a pretty handy time to show whether he can or can't.

The pitching staff now includes Bill Beckman, John Michaels, Bobby Durham, Louis Garland, Wilbur Cook, Ralph West and Jim Lindsey. The latter will be disposed of.

The Crackers, it is understood, will get Al Williams back if he fails to make good with the Athletics. This is not the pitcher deal that remains to be completed, however. That deal alone will round out the staff in great fashion.

In catching staff, of course, includes Paul Richards and Jim Galvin, who is still a "B" man. It would be difficult to name a better rookie catcher in the league than Galvin.

Lou Brown, Racer, Killed in Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 6.—(UP)—Lou Brown, 34, champion, Ill., was killed instantly today when his low-slung racer crashed at the fair grounds here.

The accident occurred as the speed driver attempted to make a turn on the fair grounds track during time trials preceding the Chatham Auto Association races.

His car left the track and overturned. Brown was dead when ambulances reached the wreckage.

I know that my friend, Mr. Bill Henry, the scholarly football observer, has said that Pittsburgh is the logical choice for the Rose Bowl assignment, but I prefer to regard this as a typographical error which slipped Bill's eye because the light was bad. I am assuming that he meant to say Louisiana State. If not, I will try to arrange a Wash Bowl game between Pitt and Louisiana in some neutral spot like the baggage car of the Twentieth Century Limited, and I will bet my deficit against Bill's

OFFICIALS STATE POETS' CHARGES 'FILED TOO LATE'

Macon School Files Appeal to Georgia High School Association.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 6.—(AP)—The executive committee of the Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Association ruled today a protest by Lanier High school, of Macon, against eligibility of certain players on the Riverside Academy football team "reached the committee too late for action."

Lanier High authorities filed an appeal which will be placed before the executive of the State High School Association.

"Pending action by the state high school committee the matter of the G. I. A. A. football championship will be held in abeyance," said a statement by the G. I. A. A. executive committee issued through Albert Simpson, of Augusta, secretary.

"According to an announcement issued today by J. L. Skinner, president, the executive committee of the G. I. A. A. will meet in the Associated Press by Albert Simpson, secretary, the executive committee ruled today the Lanier High school's protest against eligibility of Riverside players reached the committee too late for action."

"An amendment to the G. I. A. A. by-law stating that all eligibility lists of members of football teams be submitted to the secretary by October 1, and that any protests against eligibility be filed by October 15."

"Since Lanier High school failed to present charges of ineligibility by the required date, the executive committee of the G. I. A. A. rules that the charges must ever out of order, and that Riverside players could not be protested."

"The Lanier High school authorities filed an appeal of the G. I. A. A. action which will go to the executive committee of the State High School Association."

"Pending action by the State High School Association committee, the matter of the G. I. A. A. football championship will be held in abeyance."

Ruling Declares Cadets Champs.

The decision of the Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Association yesterday in the Lanier High school protest of Riverside Military academy temporarily awards the 1936 G. I. A. A. football championship to Coach Red Sanders' powerful cadet eleven.

However, a meeting immediately called by the Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Association and should the state high school officials overrule the G. I. A. A. action, the Lanier High Boys' High would meet in a playoff for the 1936 championship.

Within an organization of 13 of the supposedly larger high schools of the state, The Georgia High School Association is the supreme law of the state in regard to high school matters, the G. I. A. A. being a group within that body.

It is hoped by one and all that the G. I. A. A. will meet immediately and get the matter straightened out once and for all.

Talk of a possible Boys' High-Riverside playoff is out of the question as the G. I. A. A. officials in their Macon meeting two weeks ago ruled that should the Lanier protest be denied, Riverside would be acclaimed legitimate champions of the G. I. A. A. for this year.

MAHONEY NAMED A.A.U. PRESIDENT

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 6.—(AP)—The bitter fight in more than a decade for the presidency of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States ended today with a decisive victory for Jeremiah Tilt Mahoney, former New York state supreme court justice and 1934 chief executive of the A. A. U. over his metropolitan antagonist and the administration's standard-bearer, Mahoney's opponent, J. Walsh.

Although Mahoney since the convention delegates gathered to renew the verbal battle where they left off a year ago in warfare over the Olympic rights and delegates whipped to a high pitch of factional antagonism, the final vote within the board of governors, into which the convention constituted itself to decide all major issues, was 109-97 for Mahoney and 127-47 for Walsh.

Mahoney was swept into office on a "reconstruction platform" by virtually solid support from the southern associations, as well as vice president Charles Hunter, San Francisco; third vice president, William Leonard Schenck, N. Y.; fourth vice president, Dr. Russell, Des Moines; secretary-treasurer, Daniel J. Ferris, New York; and assistant to the president, Lyman Bingham, Chicago.

Ferris and Bingham were re-elected for four-year terms, under provision covering their jobs as salaried officers.

Other officers elected: First vice president, Jack Rafferty, Houston; second vice president, Charles Hunter, San Francisco; third vice president, William Leonard Schenck, N. Y.; fourth vice president, Dr. Russell, Des Moines; secretary-treasurer, Daniel J. Ferris, New York; and assistant to the president, Lyman Bingham, Chicago.

Ferris and Bingham were re-elected for four-year terms, under provision covering their jobs as salaried officers.

Guldaul Leads at Miami

AUTO SALESMAN
HAS 207 SCORE;
LITTLE IS NEXT

Horton Smith, Off Form, Drops To Tie for 3d Place.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Dec. 6.—(AP)—Horton Smith, of Chicago, was far from his sharp-shooting self today, carding a poor 77, and hiding Ralph Guldaul, of St. Louis, moved up to the top in the $10,000 Miami
Biltmore open golf tournament.
Smith's sixteenth third round dropped him from the top, which he had occupied since the tournament started Friday, to a four-way tie for third place with Denny Shute, of Coral Gables; Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa.; and Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Texas, at 214 for 54 holes.
Alone in second place, still far back of Guldaul with his 207, was W. Lawson Little Jr., of San Francisco, the former amateur champion, who now plays for cash. Little took 73 today, after a record-equalling 66 the day before, for a three-day score of 213.

WAY OFF FORM.
The bland and Smith, who won this event and the $2,500 first money last year, was way off form.
He was over par on seven holes, including a 4 on the par four fifth.
There he drove into a trap, was over the green with his third and chipped back so far that he still needed two putts to get down.
On the par three twelfth, where he took a four, another chip rolled way past the pin. He had one birdie—a dunce on the second hole, which Jack Guldaul, of Coral Gables, N. J., made in one of the first days.

Guldaul, who has now played every round below par, entered the home stretch of 18 holes with a lead of 18 holes over Smith. He was the favorite to win the $10,000 prize. He was selected by John S. Bick, local ally owner, first prize he won in the recent Augusta open.

He had a 69 today to go with a 68 the day before and a 70 of Friday. His outward 32 today was three under par, decorated with an eagle on the 10th hole. He took five to get the par fourteenth hole and another five on the par four 17th and finished with a birdie four on the 18th hole, which he won on the green in two.

SARAZEN OFF.
The veteran Gene Sarazen, always a threat, also was off form today.
He had a 74 for a three-day card of 215. That put him in a tie for seventh place with Mike Turnesa, of New York, who negotiated the third round in 1937.

Bob Servis, of Dayton, Ohio, registered the lead in the amateur division with 74-76-76—226. The largest galleries were to watch a tournament here followed the favorites around in ideal weather.

Shoot Honors Won
By Luther McDonald
Luther McDonald walked away with high-gun honors at the West End Gun Club yesterday. Young McDonald's classification places him in the Class C division, but his perfect score of 50 straight outdistanced any shooter competing in the day's program.
In addition to the high-gun honors
the youngster won the ham of the day in Class B. Dr. J. J. Childs won the ham in Class A with the lowest score ever posted at the club for a prize in Class A. Dr. Childs' score of 38.50 was badly handicapped by high winds. Lyman Smith finished a runner-up to McDonald in Class B with the score of 41x50.
F. L. Mazon won the ham in Class
C. He was pushed close by Ralph Zachry, who finished in second place with 41x50.

BREATHLESS MOMENTS
By Charles W. Duke

The champion of the world lies prone upon the floor!
The tremendous slug who spent the reigning title of $2,650,000 to witness the grueling battle between the two leading gladiators of the 20th century, leap to their feet! Their mingled cheers and groans fill the ringside microphones and are heard the world over by millions of radio listeners.
Mad confusion reigns within the roped enclosure. It is the seventh round of the titanic fight. Deprived of the title of world champion in a 10-round decision battle only the previous year, the challenger lusts for revenge and the return of his title crown. Boring in close, he catches his opponent near the ropes and crosses a swift and lethal punch downward across the champion's chin.
It hurts! The nerveless champion is dazed! Before he can snap out of it he is blown back in over his guard.
One . . . two . . . three . . .
Backed spectators claim seven hits are delivered in rapid succession—each a sledge-hammer thrust delivered to the head and midsection. The champion folds up and crumples to the floor, throwing out his left arm for support against the lower rope.
The wide-sweeping amphitheater in Chicago is in a bedlam. Over the fallen champion stands his antagonist. So eager is he for the "kill" that he cannot back away until assured of victory. It seems like a dream—the man who conquered him only 12 months ago now downed, apparently out. The rules of the game require that an opponent shall retire to a neutral corner after a knockdown blow. The challenger is the victim of over-excitely.

Now the third man in the ring—the referee—is counting. Some say it was five seconds after the actual knockdown before the referee began tolling off the seconds. Before he is through—Gene Tunney rises to his feet, resumes fighting and receives the decision over Jack Dempsey at the end of the 10th round of the famous "Battle of the Long Count," occurring at Chicago September 22, 1927.

Leads Miami Meet

SPORT-LIGHT

More Than Spirit.

FOOTBALL still is a game in which inspiration is a big factor. The players can be fired for great effort on a given day, and, if their spirit is sufficiently robust, it will endure through 60 minutes of play in which they are likely to outdo themselves.
But underlying that spirit must be good physical condition and a lot of sound football sense. Plus these two, spirit very often will make the difference between the two contending teams. But not spirit alone. Not any more. The game has advanced to a point where a coach no longer can take a poorly equipped team, give it a fight talk and see it come through against a well-drilled, physically fit team, which also has some spirit of its own. The will to win, the desire to win, the memory of a departed hero or even—as may be the case—of the coach's job, can be badly defeated by a hard-charging enemy line and a set of backs who know how to follow their blockers.

Take the Harvard team that came up so strongly as the season moved along, recovering from a bad beating by Army and then going on to tie Princeton and take Yale right down to the last gasp before the decision went to Kelley, Frank & Co. That Harvard team had plenty of spirit.
But it also was a well-coached team that matured under fire. Dick Harlow, one of the ablest coaches in the country, taught the boys a lot of first-rate football. They couldn't afford to be in a hurry, but, by hammering away at it, they finally got it. That was when they started to go places.

The Georgia Surge.

Jim Crowley said after the Fordham-Georgia game that he never saw a more inspired team than the toy Bulldogs. The Athens were out there at the Polo Grounds, Fordham was headed for the Rose Bowl, but Georgia came piling up out of the south and fought the Ram so tenaciously that the game was a real battle.
Ida Simmons, Lorraine Gills, Rose Simmons, Helen Randlett, Polly Dozier, Rose Stapleton and many other girls were in the line. They were the top four ranking women bowlers of the country.

Mrs. Warrington averaged exactly 116 per game to win the Southern Individual championship here, besting the scores of such stars as Helen Randlett, of Richmond; Mrs. Chir
Mann, of Miami; Sue Miller, of Baltimore, and Bronson Guillards, of Washington.

This bowler has developed rapidly, possessing real competitive spirit and doing her best bowling under pressure. Holding the world's three-game record, trying the world's record in the Class C division, and the local record for high single game of 172, she is looking for other fields to conquer.

national publicity and having no real rival with the Rose Bowl.
A TITLE GAME.
Instead the selection of Santa Clara, the nation's only undefeated team, was the only thing that kept the game which may decide the championship.

There is no effort to deprecate Pitt's record or the fact that he has a great football team. But Pitt's tie with Fordham and Georgia's subsequent defeat of Fordham and N. Y.
U's defeat of Fordham, cost Pitt much prestige in the south.
T. C. U. plays Santa Clara next Saturday and the Horned Frogs may win. But should they win or tie the Santa Clara record still will be superior to that of Pitt.

The Orange Bowl game, a Miami affair, is handicapped by having a stadium seating only 15,000 people. It will be a real attraction fully equal to the Rose Bowl.

MARRY ME UNIONS HIT

U. S. SHIP SUBSIDIES

New Issue Sought in Strike; Food Vessel Speeds for Alaska.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—(AP)— Maritime unions sought to make federal ship subsidies an issue in the current strike today when the government's first emergency food ship turned toward Alaska and authorities spurred their attention to Hawaii's urgent needs.
The unions distributed thousands of pamphlets entitled "Buy a Ship and Make Your Fortune." It suggested that others besides big shipown-ing companies could profit from the government's plan to build ships ships and then obtain profitable mail-carrying contracts.
The pamphlets singled out the so-called "big three" companies—the Matson, Dollar and American-Hawaiian lines—as the principal holdouts against union demands.
The unions urged taxpayers to protest to the government "that the ship subsidy is a bad enough to have to pay, but that the further drain on your purses which is taking place while the big three are refusing to settle this strike is a little too much for you to bear."
In a statement, Thomas G. Plant, spokesman for the shipowners, said the American-Hawaiian line received no subsidy whatever under the Merchant Marine Act of 1928 and that subsidies were paid in no case where ships were not operating.

With a capacity cargo, the Bureau of Indian Affairs ship Boxer left Seattle early today for southern Alaska. She was the first ship to sail for the territory since the strike started October 29. The steamer Arctic and W. C. Gorges, chartered by the government under presidential authority, will sail later this week for northern ports.

sume peace negotiations tomorrow

tative agreements with all unions in-were missing.

Administration forces who are sponsoring the liquor and liquor program to raise $700,000 for schools, health, public welfare and to grant homestead

all-out battle tomorrow when the legislators start arriving for the open-cial session together November 23.
